More than five months ago, San Francisco's shelter-in-place order went into effect, dramatically changing our City. Businesses shut down. Schools closed. The way we socialized and shared in cultural experiences warped. San Francisco Public Works, like other essential government agencies, nonprofits and businesses, quickly pivoted our workforce and daily operations to meet the challenge.

All 1,600-plus employees at San Francisco Public Works are designated essential workers. More than 100 of us have been deployed to the City's Emergency Operations Center to work on the citywide response to the COVID-19 pandemic. Some workers temporarily took on different duties within the department, for example, cleaning streets instead of paving roads. Some others had to take a leave to be with their kids when schools and childcare centers shuttered, or, unfortunately, to care for themselves or loved ones stricken by the horrible virus.

Most on our team, however, have been performing their regular jobs, albeit under very different circumstances - working remotely from home, if feasible, or in their offices or in the field wearing face coverings and keeping socially distanced. But our work serving the people of San Francisco continues. Every day. Around the clock.

This month, for our In the Works newsletter, we thought we'd showcase just a sliver of who we are and what we do by featuring a different San Francisco Public Works' project, program, operation or team each day. While we certainly did not capture the full breadth of our organization, the examples we came across over the past 31 days provide a good snapshot of San Francisco Public Works.

Our Bureau of Urban Forestry team members Johnny and Jon are working on The Embarcadero today clearing fallen palm fronds and sprucing up the tree basins.

Charles Higuera, who oversees project management for our Building Design & Construction Division, took part in today's BuildSF webinar on returning to public buildings amid #COVID19. Extra cleaning, social distancing design, limits on building capacity part of the new approach.

The screenshot shows a Zoom webinar interface. The main content is a slide titled "SF Capital Plan - COVID Impact". The slide text includes:

- Significantly reduced General Fund commitment proposed in context of COVID-19 emergency and anticipated deficit
- 3 Year SF Investment: $83.8M (26% lower than previous budget - $41.8M funded in FY21 and $42.0M funded in FY22)
- 3 Year Other Source Investment: $147.3M
- TOTAL 3-Year Proposed Investment: $231.1M

Below the text, there is a bubble chart with three circles: a blue circle labeled $187.3M, a yellow circle labeled $99.8M, and a blue circle labeled $290.6M. To the right of the slide is a video feed of Charles Higuera, a man with glasses and a beard, wearing a light-colored shirt. The Zoom interface includes a top bar with "Zoom.us Meeting" and "The SFCA 2020", and a bottom bar with "Audio Settings", "Chat", "Raise Hand", "Q&A", and "Leave" buttons.
